Namhansanseong Fortress

Namhansanseong Fortress features walls that stretch over 11 km around the rugged natural terrain, situated at an altitude of over 480 meters. Construction of the main fortress of Namhansanseong began in 1624, utilizing stones from the Silla Dynasty's Jujang Fortress, and was completed two years later. The outer fortress was built after the Byeongja Horan (the Manchu invasions), with a notable time difference from the main fortress. This showcases the distinctive construction techniques that evolved from the Three Kingdoms period to the Joseon Dynasty.

Iseongsanseong Fortress

As a representative historic site of Hanam City, it is a stone fortress built during the Three Kingdoms period, with the entire area within the fortress walls designated as a historic site. It was considered strategically important due to its advantageous location for defending against enemies in the Hangang River basin. What is notable is that the walls, which have a circumference of about 2 km, are constructed with stones shaped like corn kernels.

Jebudo Island

Jebudo Island, a small island in the sea in front of Seosin-myeon, is known as the 'Miracle of Moses.' This mystical island experiences a phenomenon during low tide where the sea splits on both sides, creating a path to enter and exit the island twice a day. Located not far from the metropolitan area and easily accessible, it is an ideal destination for a family-oriented one-night, two-day vacation. The sunset reflected on the water is regarded as one of the most beautiful sights on the west coast.

Yungneung and Geolleung

Yungneung is the tomb of Crown Prince Sado (King Jangjo) and his wife, Heongyeong (Lady Hyegyeong of the Hong clan), while Geolleung is the tomb of King Jeongjo, the 22nd king of Joseon, and Queen Hyoui (of the Kim clan). The area around the tomb is surrounded by dense pine forests and oak groves that provide ample shade, making it a recommended spot for historical education and forest walks. The hanging painting behind the Daeungjeon, a masterpiece created under the direction of Kim Hong-do, and the camellia tree in front of Daeungjeon, which is said to have been planted by King Jeongjo, are natural monuments over 200 years old.

Chang Uchin Museum of Art Yangju

Chang Uchin Museum of Art Yangju honors the achievements and spirit of Chang Uchin, a second-generation Western-style painter representing modern and contemporary Korean art, by exhibiting and researching his works and materials to contribute to the development of Korean contemporary art. The museum building features a unique structure inspired by the tiger painting 'Hojakdo' by artist Chang Uchin, consisting of a courtyard and individual rooms. It was awarded the 'Kim Swoo Geun Prize' in 2014, selected by BBC as one of the 'Greatest New Museums' in the same year, and recognized as one of the 'Local 100' by the Ministry of Culture, Sports and Tourism in 2023.

Hoeamsaji Museum of Yangju City

Hoeamsa Temple was the largest royal temple during the Joseon Dynasty, receiving significant support from the royal family and playing an important role in the history of Korean Buddhism. Although the glorious appearance of Hoeamsa from that time is no longer visible, it is not difficult to imagine its former status through the remains left at the temple site. The Hoeamsaji Museum of Yangju City is reexamining the history and significance of Hoeamsa Temple, which was the largest royal temple during the late Goryeo and early Joseon periods. The museum is establishing itself as a specialized institution focused on the history and culture of Yangju City through its functions of artifact collection, preservation, research, exhibition, and education.

The World's Eye on Gyeonggi

Suwon Hwaseong Fortress

The fortress, constructed during the reign of King Jeongjo of the Joseon Dynasty, is the crowning achievement of the kingdom in terms of fortress construction style and technique. At the time of the construction, modern scientific tools such as geojunggi and nongno were invented and used in piling up the stones. The fortress features bricks and tiles produced with a unique technique. Also, the fortress, unlike typical Chinese and Japanese fortresses, was built on a flat land, and thus had both defensive and commercial and practical functions. The fortress, which guarded the southern part of the capital of Joseon, was designated as a UNESCO World Cultural Heritage in 1997.

Namhansanseong Fortress

The fortress, built during the Unified Silla era, extends over 12 kilometers of rough natural terrain. Situated over 500 meters above sea level, it played a major role in defending Hanyang, the capital of Joseon. The area within the fortress functioned as a temporary capital in case of emergency situations and a military and administrative center that has a haenggung(temporary palace) equipped with jongmyo(royal ancestral shrine) and sajik(altars to the God of Earth and the God of Grains). The area also had wells and ponds that enabled thousands of people to inhabit the place. Today, visitors can follow the traces of the old kingdom along the five trails created along the fortress walls. It was included in the UNESCO World Cultural Heritage list in 2014.

Namsadang Nori

It is a form of traditional performing arts that originated from the group of performers called "Namsadangpae" that was active during the Joseon era. Back in those days, the Namsadangpae wandered around the rural and fishing villages of the country and gave their performances of pungmul nori(percussion music), beona(dish spinning), salpan(tumbling), eoreum(tightrope walking and dancing), deotbogi(mask play) and deolmi(puppet play). Nowadays, Anseong Namsadang Nori is considered to be the successor to the tradition of the Namsadang Nori and faithfully preserves and continues its performance style and techniques. It was designated as Important Intangible Cultural Heritage no. 3 of Korea in 1964 and a UNESCO Important Intangible Cultural Heritage in 2009.

Hantangang River Geopark

Hantangang River Geopark is Korea's first geological park surrounding a river. It includes the Hantanggang River that comes from Pyeongyang-gun, Gangwon-do, North Korea, and its junction with Imjingang River at its downstream. Some parts of the current Hantangang River and Imjingang River were created approximately 540,000 to 120,000 years ago due to a volcano eruption. The lava that erupted during the period created the basalt cliffs, columnar joints, waterfalls, and other various beautiful geographical sights.
